Introduction to Conflict Studies:: Empirical, Theoretical, and Ethical Dimensions. By Vern Neufeld Redekop, Jean-Francois Rioux

Introduction to Conflict Studies: Empirical, Theoretical, and Ethical Dimensions is a survey textbook that takes a multidisciplinary approach to study the nature of conflict, the actions of people in conflict, and the processes used to deal with conflict. The wider goal of the book is to provide the reader with an accurate and balanced view of the main schools of thought on conflict analysis and conflict resolution.

Organized into five parts, each section is built around answering a question central to the aspect of conflict under discussion. These questions are:

1. What is conflict?
2. How is conflict experienced at different levels in the world at the present time?
3. What are the causes and dynamics of conflict from different perspectives?
4. How do we, and can we, deal with conflict?
5. What ethical issues emerge from the study of conflict and from interventions in conflicts?

The content is supported by concise chapter conclusions and a full range of pedagogical features, including questions for critical thinking and case studies highlighting actual conflicts and their outcomes, along with an analysis of the effectiveness of the approaches taken in addressing the conflict.

Editorial Review

Review

"This text covers an impressive amount of intellectual ground. . . . The authors have capably presented both the unity and diversity of conflict studies."

--Nathan Funk, University of Waterloo

"The book covers a vast array of theoretical literature and would be very useful for someone coming to the subject matter for the first time."

--Paul Gecelovsky, University of Western Ontario
